Policing scholarships offered to South Asian students, residents

News Mar 24, 2017 South Asian Focus

The Toronto Police Service has announced two scholarships to students from the South Asian community who want to pursue a career in policing, law or a related field. The scholarship has been instituted in honour of Paul Fernandes — the first member of a visible minority group in Canada to reach the rank of staff inspector. Any student entering a post-secondary institution or currently a resident and attending a school and in financial need will be able to qualify for the scholarship. Being able to demonstrate leadership, academic achievement and a commitment to the community would also be important criteria.

The application package can be accessed by contacting saisn@torontopolice.on.ca. Completed applications are due by April 15, 2017.